

Skip A Lunch

For Prader-Willi Syndrome

Join us this month in raising funds for the Utah Prader-Willi Syndrome Association by skipping a lunch and donating the money you would have spent toward this great cause!

Help us send our youth to Camp Kostopulos this summer ($395 per person), provide respite care and educational materials for Utah families, and fund our new medical clinic and state conference for physicians, therapists and families.

What is Prader-Willi Syndrome?

Prader-Willi syndrome (PWS) is a complex genetic disorder affecting the hypothalamus of the brain. Prader-Willi syndrome is a lifelong condition complicated by developmental delays, low muscle tone, mental retardation, and behavioral issues.

A universal characteristic of PWS is a chronic feeling of hunger. Most of the children in Utah with the syndrome have not been diagnosed. Early diagnosis and intervention can prevent many of the complications associated with the syndrome, including morbid obesity, diabetes, congestive heart failure and respiratory failure.

Prader-Willi syndrome is one of the 10 most common syndromes seen in genetic clinics. While there is no cure, early interventions are working, thanks to your help!

Thank-You for Making a Difference!
